Advice Regarding Fur Garments

There's no reason why the fur coat of last season should be cast aside simply because there has been a radical change in styles.

The heavy business of our workrooms has practically been completed, and what we will suggest to you can be executed without delay.

These last season's coats may readily be remodeled to conform in every particular both with the present style and with that which we know will be in vogue next year.

Right there is our strongest reason for advising alteration at the present time. The greater part of weather requiring heavy furs is yet to come.

You will this year have nearly a full season's service, and we can assure you that the remodeled coat will comply strictly with the accepted fashion for at least another year.

Be guided by our judgment and experience. We'd be greatly pleased to sell you a new coat, but it's only fair to you to tell you why there may be no such necessity.

Costs $12,000 to Raise Hulk.
Commander R. D. White, U. S. N., naval attaché at Rome and Vienna, has reported to the navy department that it probably will cost about $12,000 to raise the United States frigate Philadelphia from the bottom of the harbor of Tripoli where she was sunk more than 100 years ago. It is not believed that the navy department will ask Congress to appropriate any funds for this purpose, especially as it is doubtful if the hulk can be raised intact.
